KOHIMA (B, D)

Today you are going to explore Khonoma Asia's first Green Village and Tuophema Tourist Village. Khonoma was a vanguard village of the Angami Naga tribe known for its fierce resistance against British dominance during the colonial period. Hunting being part of their culture Khonoma, one of the oldest Angami Villages has shown the way for others to follow by giving up their culture of hunting or cut trees and strongly practices 'renewable Jhoom cultivation'. Their technique was to plant alder trees and cut them occasionally. They resist fire and can grow back from nothing. They are also known to generate one of the best natural manures at a great pace. By cutting smaller branches and leaving only the bigger branches they've succeeded in farming without cutting trees. The Tuophema tourist village developed here has been modelled around the ethnic tourism model and visitors are offered modern and hygienic accommodation in the traditional huts in an ethnic setting. Served everything from rice beer to local food, tourists can experience the local culture in these pretty settings
